Every year, on June 1, the World Children's Day will be widely celebrated worldwide. This date represents the need to support the rights of children, to pay attention to their prosperous life, and the need to provide comprehensive support of the younger generation. Children are the most delicate and at the same time in society. It is an important task of family to grow in their healthy growth, education, and safe environment not only, but also the family, but all society and the state. This day is to remember this responsibility and promotes the need to show love and attention to children.

The idea of protecting the rights of the child has become a pressure at the beginning of the twentieth century. During this period, various initiatives were promoted to live a safe life of children, to ensure a healthy growth and education.

The date of June 1st as the International Children's Day has been formalized since 1950. This day is organized to remind the responsibility for the life, health, health and prosperity of children around the world and to improve the attention of society in this direction.

Today, child protection is one of the important social responsibilities. The guarantees of the rights of every child, their preservation, acquire healthy life, and growing up in family love is one of the main criteria for sustainability.

Quality education, upbringing and social environment play an important role in the development of the child. Since preschool education, it is necessary to identify a child, kindness and attention to the child.

Protection of children from violence, operation and indifference, especially in the context of modern information technology, is becoming more important. Every society necessitates to consider the interests of children a priority.

All countries are forced to protect the rights of the child, ensure their healthy and safe growth. Today, there are many initiatives and programs to protect children on a global scale. All this is aimed at promoting the best interests of children. In particular, international organizations, in particular the UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund), is helping to improve the lives of children.

States are introducing the mechanisms for children in their domestic law and policies that provide attention and affection. For example, the laws of the Republic of Uzbekistan provide for the protection of children's rights and take large steps in the implementation of children's policy. The development of preschool education and education in the country, as well as the improvement of the health care system is an important step for children.

Another aspect of protecting the rights of the child is the right to education. Education is one of the main rights for each child, as education will help expand their future opportunities as a child. Therefore, the states must work hard to improve the education system and create equal opportunities for children.

It is also important to social protection of children. Unfortunately, in some areas, children are still experiencing problems such as poverty, violence, labor exploitation. This has a violation of children's rights, a negative impact on their physical and mental health. The international community needs to work together to address such cases.

Today, actions in the protection of child protection, especially internationally, are of great importance in creating safe and healthy living conditions for children. Like Uzbekistan, countries are developing many laws and initiatives to ensure the rights of children and their well-being.

The role of parents and society in protecting children is also very important. To be healthy and happy, first of all, it must be love, attention and support in the family. The family environment is a key factor in raising the child, its mental and physical health. Therefore, the state pays great attention to family support in the development of child protection policy.

The awareness institutions play an important role in protecting the rights of children and the implementation of all of them. Schools should not only be safe space to ensure that the child is free to feel free in the social environment, make friends, make their talents develop.

Along with the development of information technology in the modern world, children are facing various threats over the Internet. Therefore, the issues of teaching them and protect them for online security, the necessary contamination on the Internet remain relevant. Parents, teachers and government agencies are required to actively work to protect children in this field.
