INTRODUCTION

National values are elements that express the identity, culture, traditions and history of a nation. They define the identity of the people and play an important role in social life, passed down from generation to generation. National values include basic aspects such as culture and art, customs and traditions, language, religious values, family values and history. Culture and art include each nation's unique art forms, music, dance, and literature. Music, folk dances, poetry and stories are important in Uzbek culture. Customs and traditions are expressed through holidays, weddings, birthdays and other events.

MATERIALS AND METHODS

Hospitality has a special place among the values of the Uzbek people. Uzbeks always welcome guests with respect and accept them as part of their family. Hospitality is not only about food, but also about human relations and friendship. When a guest comes, the best food is prepared for him, and friendly conversations are held with him.

This tradition plays an important role in the social life of Uzbeks and strengthens their trust in each other. Among the Uzbek national values, respect for the family is also important. Family, for Uzbeks, includes ties not only to relatives, but also to friends and neighbors. In the Uzbek family, great respect is shown to older people, especially parents and grandparents. They play an important role in bringing up their children, teaching them the values of life and ensuring that they become good human beings. Communication between family members and mutual support is an integral part of the social life of Uzbeks. Customs and traditions are another important aspect of Uzbek national values. The traditions of the Uzbek people include many holidays and ceremonies. For example, Nowruz, as a spring festival, is held to welcome the new year and celebrate the renewal of nature. On this holiday, people congratulate each other, wear new clothes, and prepare traditional food. Nowruz represents the unity, friendship and hospitality of the Uzbek people. Uzbek national values are also expressed in art and literature. Uzbek literature is mainly enriched with poetry and stories. Great exponents of Uzbek classical literature, for example, Alisher Navoi, covered topics such as human values, love, friendship and justice in his works. Navoi's works are read and studied not only in Uzbek, but also in other languages. This is important for preserving the cultural heritage of the Uzbek people and passing it on to future generations.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSIONS

Music and dance are another integral part of Uzbek national values. Uzbek music is distinguished by its diversity and beauty. Uzbek folk music is mainly performed with traditional instruments such as rubob, dutor and doira. These songs are often about people's life, nature and love. Uzbek dances are also known for their delicacy and expressive movements. Dances are often performed during holidays and ceremonies, and this further enriches the culture of the Uzbek people. Uzbek national values are also reflected in language and literature. The Uzbek language represents the culture and history of the Uzbek people.[1]

The works created in the Uzbek language help preserve the uniqueness of the nation and its historical heritage. Poems, stories and novels written in the Uzbek language provide information about the life and customs of their people. Uzbek literature is interesting and important not only for Uzbeks, but also for other nations. Uzbek national values are also related to religious values. Most of the Uzbek people have adopted Islam, and this religion plays an important role in their lives. Religious values determine the moral standards of Uzbeks and influence their way of life. Uzbeks celebrate religious holidays, such as Ramadan and Eid al-Adha, with their families and loved ones. These holidays help to strengthen the unity and religious values of the Uzbek people.[2]

It is also related to Uzbek national values and historical heritage. Uzbekistan has a rich history, contacts with many cultures and peoples. This formed the identity and culture of the Uzbek people. Historical places in Uzbekistan, such as Samarkand, Bukhara and Khiva, reflect the rich history and culture of the Uzbek people. These places are interesting and worth studying not only for Uzbeks, but also for other peoples. [3]

Uzbek national values are also related to environmental values. The attitude of the Uzbek people to nature affects their way of life. Uzbeks respect nature and try to use its resources wisely. In Uzbekistan, many initiatives are being implemented to solve environmental problems and preserve nature. This is the desire of the Uzbek people to provide a healthy and clean environment to future generations.[4]

CONCLUSION

In short, Uzbek national values represent the uniqueness, traditions and way of life of their people. These values are reflected in many areas such as hospitality, respect for family, traditions, art and literature, music and dance, language and religious values, historical heritage and environmental values. Uzbek national values are an interesting and worthwhile topic not only for Uzbeks, but also for other nations. Their preservation and transmission to future generations is important for the preservation and development of the cultural heritage of the Uzbek people.
