INTRODUCTION

Education is the most important and integral part of a person's life. It plays an important role not only in obtaining knowledge, but also in personal development, building social relationships and developing intercultural dialogue. The educational process is carried out by giving a person the skills and knowledge necessary to open up his inner potential, realize his self and find his place in society. The education of each person is important in determining his future and life path. Education is also a key tool in community development and social justice. Cooperation between teachers, students and educational institutions creates a more effective educational environment through the exchange of knowledge and experience. The knowledge gained in the educational process helps to develop mutual understanding, tolerance and respect for people, which enhances intercultural communication. The importance of education is manifested in the fact that it affects not only on a personal, but also on a global scale. Today, global problems, economic crises, social conflicts, and intercultural differences need to be addressed through education. Therefore, in the educational process, it is important to give students a wide range of knowledge, introduce them to different cultures and increase social responsibility. Education is an important foundation for the future of humanity, which not only gives knowledge, but also takes its place in the unification of people and the preservation of peace.

MATERIALS AND METHODS

Education, First of all, develops a person's ability to think. In the process of acquiring knowledge, people acquire logical thinking, a critical approach and problem-solving skills. These skills, in turn, shape individuals as individuals who are more independent and capable of expressing their thoughts. Knowledge gained through education helps people make the right decisions in their lives. Human beings are able to expand their capabilities through education and find the resources necessary to achieve their goals. Education is also important in promoting social justice. Everyone, regardless of their social class, has the right to education. Through education, it is possible to ensure social equality, solve social problems in society and improve the quality of life of people. Education also helps to increase social mobility. Typically, people with high educational attainment have the opportunity to live economically stable and successful lives. This, in turn, reduces the difference between social strata in society.[1]

There are many problems in the world: poverty, wars, social injustice and environmental pollution. The role of education in solving these problems is enormous. Through education, humans acquire the knowledge and skills necessary to understand and solve problems. For example, education in Ecology and sustainable development is necessary to solve environmental problems. Through this, humans are able to maintain the environment, conserve resources, and operate in a sustainable development direction. The power of education is also manifested in the development of intercultural communication. Through education, people are introduced to other cultures, traditions and values. This, in turn, increases tolerance, tolerance, and mutual understanding. Intercultural dialogue is important in ensuring peace and stability on a global scale. Through education, human beings develop mutual respect and understanding, reducing social conflict. In addition, Education also plays an important role in the development of innovation.[2]

RESULTS AND DISCUSSIONS

Through education, the younger generation learns new ideas, innovative solutions and technologies. This, in turn, helps to improve economic development and the overall well-being of society. Innovations, in turn, serve to create new jobs, ensure economic growth and make social changes in society. At the same time, the power of education is also important in personal development. Through education, humans discover their abilities, talents, and interests. In the educational process, individuals will be able to define their goals, identify ways to achieve them, and make their lives more meaningful. This is important in achieving success and self-development in personal life.[3]

The power of education is also manifested in solving global problems. Global problems in the world, such as climate change, poverty and wars, can be addressed through education. Through education, individuals will be able to understand global issues, find solutions to them, and educate the public about these issues. Education also helps to promote global cooperation. It is possible to work together to solve global problems by establishing cooperation in the field of education between countries, sharing knowledge and learning experience. The importance of education in intercultural communication has always played an important role in the history of mankind. Each culture has its own characteristics, Customs and traditions, and the understanding and acceptance of these differences is achieved through education. Education is an important tool in promoting human interaction, increasing tolerance, and promoting social justice. Intercultural dialogue is basically a process aimed at developing mutual understanding and cooperation between different nations and peoples. Education forms the cornerstone of this process, as through education, individuals are able to become familiar with other cultures while learning their own. This process, in turn, ensures that intercultural communication is effective and meaningful. Through education, humans gain knowledge of other cultures, which increases their mutual respect. Students become familiar with the history, art, literature, and customs of different cultures and become aware of their importance. This understanding helps to accept and respect mutual differences. The knowledge gained in the educational process encourages individuals to avoid conflicts and contradictions.[4]

The importance of education in intercultural communication is also reflected in the development of tolerance. Education teaches students to recognize and accept differences between different cultures. This, in turn, helps to reduce social conflicts. Tolerance creates the opportunity for each person to express their opinion and ensures readiness to understand others. In the educational process, students acquire the skills of communicating, exchanging ideas and participating in debates. These skills are necessary to express their thoughts in intercultural communication and understand others. Students, in the process of sharing ideas, learn to hear different perspectives and be open-minded towards them. This, in turn, helps to make intercultural communication effective and meaningful.[5]

Education is also important in the development of global cooperation. It enhances intercultural dialogue by establishing cooperation in education between different countries, sharing knowledge and experience. Knowledge and skills acquired through education in solving Global problems prepare individuals to work together and solve problems peacefully. The importance of education in intercultural communication is also reflected in ensuring peace and stability. The development of intercultural dialogue helps to ensure peace and stability on a global scale. Through education, human beings learn about avoiding war and conflict, solving problems peacefully. This process is important in ensuring social justice and maintaining peace. In addition, Education also plays an important role in the preservation and development of cultural heritage. Students seek to appreciate and preserve their cultures by studying them. At the same time, they contribute to the enrichment of the global cultural environment through the study of other cultures. The knowledge gained in the educational process helps students to understand their cultures and their history further. In order to further explore the importance of education in intercultural dialogue, it is necessary for teachers and educational institutions to take into account the issues of intercultural communication in the development of curricula. It is important to provide students with the opportunity to get acquainted with different cultures, develop their communication skills and conduct classes aimed at increasing tolerance. Through this, the educational process becomes more efficient and meaningful.[6]

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, the power of education is very important in changing the world. Through education, human beings acquire knowledge, skills and values to improve their lives and the environment around them. Education plays an important role in promoting social justice, fostering innovation, enhancing intercultural dialogue, and addressing global issues. Education is undoubtedly a determining force for the future of mankind, and everyone has the right to education. Through education, we will be able to build a more prosperous, stable and fair society. We must never forget the power of education in changing the world.
